Councillor Carl Les – North Yorkshire County Council

County Councillor Carl Les is Leader of the County Council and has been a member of the Executive since 2000. He was first elected to the County Council in 1997 and represents the Catterick Bridge division. His background is in hospitality and hotel management.

He is Chairman of the North Yorkshire Police and Crime Panel and sits on various boards representing the County Council, especially the Local Enterprise Partnership.

Previous roles have included Council Member of the North Yorkshire Learning and Skills Council, Director of Business Link York and North Yorkshire, and Board Member of the Yorkshire Pantry. Carl is active in the voluntary sector as a parish councillor, school governor, trustee of North Yorkshire Youth and Hambleton, Richmondshire, Selby and District and Ryedale CAB, and a director of the Wensleydale Railway.

Trevor Hopkins, Asset Based Consulting

Trevor is one of a small but growing group of people in the UK who, since 2007, have been championing the use of asset-based approaches to improve health, resilience and wellbeing outcomes and challenge preventable inequalities for individuals, families and communities.

In 2010 he co-authored the hugely influential and internationally recognised publication 'A glass half-full: how an asset approach can improve community health and well-being'. This brought the concept of asset-based approaches to a much wider audience than the mainly academic researchers and writers who had developed these ideas over the previous 35 years. He was subsequently involved in the writing and online publication of 'What makes us healthy? The asset approach in practice: evidence, action, evaluation' in 2012. His latest work 'Head, hands and heart: asset-based approaches in health care - A review of the conceptual evidence and case studies of asset-based approaches in health, care and wellbeing' was published by The Health Foundation April 2015.

Trevor runs 'Asset Based Consulting' with his wife Jayne and they are currently working with County, City & Borough Councils and CVS organisations to develop, deliver and evaluate asset based community development approaches to improving health, care, resilience and wellbeing services and outcomes. His previous background in art teaching and long experience of delivering training and coaching programmes for British Athletics means that he brings very creative and active approaches to his work on health, wellbeing, leadership and asset-based community development

He is an advisor on the Resilience Steering Group for the Glasgow Centre for Population Health, a guest lecturer on Durham University's MSc on Public Health Policy.

Dr Lincoln Sargeant – Director of Public Health, North Yorkshire.

Lincoln has been Director of Public Health for North Yorkshire since November 2012. He leads a core team of public health specialists who work closely with communities and organisations across England's largest county to improve the health and wellbeing of residents and reduce the variations in health outcomes between communities. He was previously a Consultant in Public Health Medicine with NHS Cambridgeshire and his portfolio included health protection, social inclusion, mental health, housing growth and planning. He was also an Associate Lecturer in Public Health and Epidemiology with the University of Cambridge and a Recognised Clinical Teacher at the medical school there. Lincoln is a medical graduate of University of West Indies and holds postgraduate degrees from University of Cambridge in Epidemiology and Public Health.

Kim Leadbeater – The Jo Cox Foundation

Kim Leadbeater is an ambassador for the Jo Cox Foundation which was set up after the murder of her sister, Jo Cox MP, on June 16, 2016. She chairs the West Yorkshire 'More In Common' volunteer group and is spokesperson for The Great Get Together, an annual weekend of community events across the UK held at the end of June.

Kim lives in the constituency of Batley and Spen where she and Jo grew up and which Jo represented in parliament from the general election in 2015 until her death.

She is a fitness professional and former lecturer in physical activity and health, with a passion for holistic wellbeing. Since Jo's death she has devoted much of her time to creating a positive legacy for her sister and has worked tirelessly to create as much positive energy and action from Jo's horrific murder. Through her work in Yorkshire and across the UK, she champions the importance of strong communities, where everyone has a sense of belonging, inspired by Jo's words in her first speech to parliament when she said: "we have far more in common than that which divides us."

Speaking of the 2018 Great Get Together, Kim said:

"The Great Get Together is about celebrating the strength of our communities and focusing on the things we have in common; and taking some time out to connect on a human level. By building strong communities where we all have a sense of belonging, and meeting people we may not normally meet, we can work towards tackling issues such as loneliness and social isolation and break down barriers which can cause division."

Workshops
11:05am – 12:05pm

Workshop 1 – Tackling loneliness: children and young people

Room: Ryedale

Facilitators: Elizabeth McPherson, Carers Resource, Claire Robinson, Carers Resource and Helen Hunter, HR Carers

Loneliness is not just something which affects older people. There is a frequent peak in adolescence (Qualter et al. 2015) and some studies have shown loneliness to be a greater concern among young people than the elderly (Mental Health Foundation 2010). A survey by Action for Children found that 43% of 17 – 25 year olds who used their service had experienced problems with loneliness.

Sustained loneliness can have a significant and often life-long impact on mental and physical health. As well as contributing to stress, anxiety, paranoia, depression and heart disease in young people, there is also a link with lower academic achievement.

This workshop will look at some of the reasons why these issues arise and discuss what is being done, and what can be done, to make life more connected and supportive for our young people.

Young Carers are a community of disadvantaged and vulnerable young people who often suffer from the impact of long-term loneliness. Their story is not unique; however, we hope to highlight how our work with this group of young people is ‘everyone’s’ business.

We will reflect on some of our work to understand and combat young people’s loneliness, in order to learn together for other vulnerable groups.

Workshop 2 – Tackling loneliness: older people

Room: Crimble

Facilitator: Sue Bradley, Age UK North Craven

There are over 2.2 million people aged 75 and over living alone in Great Britain, an increase of almost a quarter (24%) over the past 20 years (Office of National Statistics). Of course, living alone does not necessarily make a person lonely, but without supportive social and family networks the risk increases.

Age UK research shows that there are 1.2 million chronically lonely older people in the UK and half a million older people go at least five or six days a week without seeing or speaking to anyone at all.

This workshop will look at some of the reasons why these issues arise and discuss what is being done, and what can be done, to make life more connected and supportive for our older people.

Workshop 3 – Tackling loneliness: What works in North Yorkshire from a funder’s perspective

Room: Cover

Facilitator: Jan Garrill, Two Ridings Foundation

The issue of loneliness is nationally acknowledged as a matter for concern and evidence shows that the effect of loneliness and isolation on mortality exceeds the impact of well-known risk factors such as obesity, and has a similar influence as cigarette smoking. (Holt-Lunstad, 2010).

Something clearly needs to be done to tackle such a serious issue, but what? This workshop will showcase good practice projects in North Yorkshire and give a flavour of what has been funded in a large rural county.

In lots of ways technology has connected us more than ever before, with people able to speak to, and see, family living on the other side of the world, receive instant messages from friends, join online communities, and find out about groups and events of interest to them nearby. Whether young or old, people are now able to keep in touch with friends and family and feel part of a community – whether that is the community where they live or a global online community of people who share their interests. And whilst this isn't a substitute for human interaction, for some, particularly people with mobility issues, it can also give them the means to be able to continue to make an active and valuable contribution to society.

However, physical human interaction in the form of face to face contact has been shown to be important for all of our physical and mental well-being - in particular for those at risk of social isolation. As the physical is increasingly replaced by the digital this can result in some unintended consequences such as a reduction in places and opportunities for people to connect; an increase in cyber bullying and us all being less physically active preferring instead to spend our leisure time on-line.

This workshop will explore the benefits which technology can bring for those at risk of social isolation and how we can combat and mitigate against its negative impacts and find ways to use it to bring us closer together.

North Yorkshire is a large county with often dispersed populations and a range of geographies. For many people, living in a rural setting can provide more meaningful contact with close neighbours than more anonymous urban settings where people less frequently know other people nearby. However, larger settlements often have a greater range of facilities and support groups in place, as villages increasingly lose shops and other communal buildings and run the risk of becoming dormitory settlements. Coastal communities attract those who have retired who often have no established social networks or family in the area, or those who are seeking seasonal employment and may form a transient population.

This workshop will consider the issues across the different North Yorkshire communities and how we can work together to tackle them.

All too often, primary care professionals can be the only human contact which chronically lonely patients have. Three out of four GPs say they see between 1 and 5 people a day who have come in mainly because they are lonely. These interactions are therefore vital to help people to access the support they need and make the connections which will work for them. Having well established activities or groups in the local area to which people can be referred or signposted is clearly essential and the voluntary and community sector play a vital role in provision, whether or not their primary objective is health and social care focussed. Educational and professional development resources for primary care staff are also important, helping identify earlier those people who are at risk of becoming lonely and better support them before they become chronically lonely.

If you come to us with a problem we will help you get back on track while recognising where others might also be facing similar experiences. We will work with you to find a way forward. Last year we helped 8,874 people with 32,971 issues. The top issues were Benefits, debt, poverty, employment and housing/homelessness. We would provide information on all these issues. In addition we also raised income and wrote of debt to the value of £5,347,998 and one of the main focus of our stand would be to help people see positive debt solutions. In addition we co-ordinate the Warm and well project and we would use the stand to promote that project and the SPOC that is the focus of the project. Last year we provided services from 15 face to face locations using 156 volunteers and staff. Still only 20% of our client service is by phone and 16% by web chat or email. The rest is all by face to face either at main locations, outreach or via home visits. We believe that keeping this mix is very important at this time.
